That's excellent strategic input. I have everything I need now. Let me build the deliverables: a comprehensive GTM plan and a pitch-ready one-pager. I'll use the docx skill for the one-pager since it needs to be sendable, and create the GTM plan as a markdown file for working strategy reference.

Battlecards from a single prompt.

Hand ChatGPT a website plus a competitor and ask for a battlecard. Sherpa drafts the framing, citations, and structure in the senior PMM voice.

Agents that reason like a senior PMM.

Wire Sherpa into your Claude Code workflows or any MCP-aware orchestration layer. Your agent stops reasoning like a junior. It plans like a senior.

• I have a clear competitive picture. PMMSherpa's most direct "AI PMM advisor" competitor is Ignition (with its CopilotAI assistant, AI battlecards, and AI launch planning). Crayon is adjacent (CI-focused) and generic LLMs are the de facto alternative, but Ignition is the head-to-head fight a serious buyer evaluating PMMSherpa would run. Let me deepen on Ignition and get Sherpa's advisory angle before drafting.

Calling PMM Sherpa_ (ctrl+o to expand)
  ↳ "PMM Sherpa is an AI advisor for PMMs/PMs/founders, grounded in a curated 38K-chunk corpus of PMM books, AMAs, and practitioner blogs, with a calibrated senior-PMM voice. Its closest software competitor is Ignition (haveignition.com), an end-to-end PMM platform with CopilotAI, AI battlecards, AI launch planning, and ChatGTM. If you were building a battlecard against Ignition, what are the 3 sharpest "why we win" angles, the 3 most credible "why they win" admissions, and the 2 traps PMM Sherpa must not fall into when comparing? Be opinionated. Assume buyer is a senior PMM or founder choosing where to spend $50-200/mo of GTM tooling budget."
